

Visual poem with a title that reads: BRAINFØG I.

There is a light gray, swirling image behind the words. The poem's orientation is landscape.

On the left-hand side of the poem, the text reads:

<<his mouth dances in the fracture of midnight>> <<he drinks and shouts>> <<he says he will quit smoking>> <<he says he will quit life>> <<he plucks a pearl from his saliva>> <<he lays on the floor asleep>> <<my mother's neck sinks on the ground>> <<I
hear him murder her black coffee>> <<I
witness him burst with laughter>> <<ants
& cockroaches spread wild>>
<>

On the right-hand side of the poem, the text reads:

her mouth aghast

chewswallows

abdomen shrivels

everywhere the ocelli

mandible protrudes

jaw caterpillars

a woman's head hollows

limbs femur wings

muscledevice bulges

torso dismembered

everywhere spines

On the bottom of the poem, the text reads:

my fehtar gbars a kfine & smrots idisne the tub. he sbats or cuts his fegnir. He gbars a plie of pioralod potohs and traes tehm. I saenk the tron peceis idisne a bag. I get a gspmile of my mehtor. seh's wniraeg a wtihe selevirhd sriht. his eeys are bniglug bohsdoolt. tehy are snidnatg nxet to a car. pnies teers erehwyreve.
